Friday, September 1, 2000 - 10:00 a.m.

These two beings are endearing (J. and M.); their double culture is interesting. They have a spontaneous openness of the heart, which enables them to immediately grasp the various aspects of our comments; these reactions are credible and precious to you. They give you truthful feedback, which comforts you and dispels the doubts that persist in your mind. Your selection of the privileged people having access to these messages is judicious. We trust you and you trust them; each one has their own place, all is well. These messages will be more and more intended for my son. He needs them, he often feels overwhelmed; it is a heavy task for a lonely being. Lonely, indeed, he has good elements around him, but he does not have the luck I had, having him by my side. We surround him with our love, but that does not replace a reassuring presence. We are trying by various means to remedy this lack.

"Love him; he needs it. See, as your heart has changed in a short time, it is now wide open to him. We are happy to note that its current vulnerability has made this miracle happen in you."

Babuji