Tuesday, October 10, 2000 - 10:00 a.m.

Man uses consciously only one small share of his potential. Apart from some beings exceptionally gifted, more advanced than the average individual, most people correspond to the level of evolution of the Earth in its current cycle. Evolution and regression belong to a system, which consists in balancing out the karmic forces. We will not venture any further into the meanders, which would not really enlighten you about the human condition. These laws go beyond the current understanding of the incarnate beings who come [to Earth] to do a precise work for their evolution. The understanding of these great intentions is not essential.

"Some form of knowledge is accessible to those who are really interested. Although this knowledge is erroneous on many aspects as it stands at the dawn of this century, it remains an element of reflection on the greatness of the universe. In the face of this complexity, man must feel small, but grateful for the attributes granted to him. Creation as a whole remains a mystery for the best scholars who believe they have found a rational explanation for everything they have explored so far. They have only raised a negligible portion of the veil; but searching is not a vain process, only the greatest humility in this area is reasonable."

Babuji