Sunday, October 15, 2000 - 10:00 a.m.

Electric pollution has drawn your attention for a long time. It is destructive and man is affected by its consequences in his subtle bodies, which pass them further on to the physical body. The Earth is surrounded by a kind of netting which seriously harms the gaseous exchange. This results in disturbances affecting the whole of the biosphere. These phenomena are felt down to the infinitely small. Your energies try to adapt to these turbulences. Certain areas of the world are more affected than others. The oceans play an important role; they represent an enormous amount of water, which neutralizes part of this pervading negativity, but there are limits to this process.

"The polarity of the Earth, necessary to its balance, is permanently thwarted.

"New energies will have to be used in the future, for the good of the planet and its inhabitants. Cries of alarm have been uttered for years by illuminated seekers, without their pronouncements being followed up. Only absolute necessity will make the countries holding the greatest power make decisions. There remains a long way to go to bring men to more wisdom. The supremacy of money is boundless. May good decisions be made in time for the good of humanity."

Babuji