Sunday, October 11, 1998 - 10:20 a.m.

(For Jean-Michel and Claire.)

Claire's father is departing softly. He is not suffering much; this is important.

"The transition will be easy. We will await him. His stay on Earth was extended for his evolution; all is well. If you need to, break off, my son, until things are sorted out; but do not stop, will you? The Mission needs you. You have taken a great stride; it would be a great pity to stop. Attend to your matters as well as possible and do the needful for your health. You will then make a fresh start. We will guide you. Don't lose heart, you are not forgotten; only that our views are not yours. Keep heart, as regards this mutation, which, in the final analysis, will benefit you. We bless you in your undertakings. You have done the right thing and you will do it in the future. Remain on this path, which is beneficial to your evolution.

"My daughter, forward all this to him, and tell him that we love him. He has done a lot for the Mission and he still has work ahead. We are with them. Blessings to the three of you."

Babuji